Re: Addition of XXX (GEB) 2910 course within Business and Development Entrepreneurship

The Business department in the School of Business and Technology would like to add the GEB 2910 course to the catalog inventory.

The course description is as follows:

This course is intended to guide undergraduate students within Business and Development Entrepreneurship discipline through the stages of writing a proposal for their research option project and subsequent thesis. Topics include planning, research and documentation, prose style and editing, document design, ethics, abstracts, and oral presentation of the proposal. They will also become acquainted with research topics, ways of framing arguments, and making points outside their fields of study relating to Business and Development Entrepreneurship, which will help them develop a more interdisciplinary perspective within their field.

Respectfully,

Debbie Psihountas, Ph. D.,
Dean, School of Business and Technology
